

KURDISTAN: NATGEO, BOOKS, FILMS, VIDEOS, PHOTOS

Updated 26 October 2014

National Geographic

National Geographic magazine began publishing in 1888. The first issue with an article on Kurdistan was published in 1909, The Mountaineers of the Euphrates. Here is an excerpt, in the idiom of those times, over a hundred years ago.

Three thousand years ago the proud kings of Assyria led their trained armies northwestward into the mountainous region of the upper Euphrates and Tigris rivers. The turbulent mountaineers against whom they advanced fled before the civilized soldiers of the Mesopotamian plain and took refuge in inaccessible heights, leaving their rude villages of mud and stones to be destroyed.

Invariably the kings claimed to have defeated the wild upland tribes, as boastful inscriptions carved in the living rock still prove; but the defeat was never permanent. As soon as the soldiers retired the mountaineers reoccupied their villages, and soon began to plunder the lowlands as lawlessly as ever.

Centuries later, when Xenophon led his ten thousand Greeks from the lower Euphrates northward across the Armenian plateau to Trebizond, the mountaineers were still untamed. All night they rolled stones down the mountain-side upon Xenophon's army and were only vanquished by a stratagem.

Today the great empires of Mesopotamia have fallen; the power of Greece has passed away; but still, as of old, the mountains breed lawlessness, and the mountaineers are the unsubdued scourge of the people of the plains.

The lineal descendants of the Carduchi who opposed the march of Xenophon are the Kurds – a sturdy, strong-featured race of Mohammedan Aryans, allied to the Persians on the one hand and to the Armenians on the other. Their home is the southern part of the Armenian plateau, among the headwaters of the Euphrates and Tigris rivers, and in the Zagros Mountains, which run southeastward from Lake Van to the Persian Gulf and form the boundary between Turkey and Persia.

The choice of words and phrasing today would likely be quite different.

Since then, NatGeo has published more than ten articles with direct reference to Kurdistan.

National Geographic Magazine issues from 1888 to 2010 are available on DVD-ROM or external hard disk with 'search' and other helpful functions for about $50.

Iraq – Where Oil and Water Mix October 1958

Talks about the booming 1950s, “. . . everywhere in Baghdad we found evidence of prosperity.” The author and his wife spent three months in Iraq during early 1958, before the July revolution that overthrew the Iraqi monarchy. This long article with many photos talks about Iraq’s short-term resources (oil) being used to develop its long-term resources (water). A 1950 law allocated 70% of national revenue to the Development Board for infrastructure development projects (irrigation and flood control, efficient land use, improved public health and education, strengthened communications, industrial development).

They visited Slemani and remarked, “The Kurds are a remarkable and thoroughly lovable people.” They relate a story about a “Kurdish bandit chieftain who terrorized all northern Iraq before he was brought to justice.” Sentenced to be hanged, he was granted one last wish. Gleefully he said to the judge, “I should like to be hanged with a red-and-green rope.”

This issue has a photo of Dokan Dam under construction. When the author mentioned to a couple of local workmen that the dam “will make a big difference in their lives” and that the “countryside will be more prosperous,” one of the workmen replied, “There is nothing wrong with our lives now. We have our sheep, our barley, and a few vegetables. It is enough to eat. When I need money, I sell a sheep. Since my land is poor, no one wants it. When there is irrigation, it will be valuable. More people will come. Life will become more complicated.”

Where are such people today?

We Who Face Death March 1975

Article on the peshmerga is particularly important because, though it was written earlier that year, it was published the same month as the Algiers accords between Saddam Hussein and the Shah of Iran that led to the collapse of the Kurdish revolution that began in 1961. Many thousands fled their homeland in Iraq to Iran and other neighboring places, and then to many parts of the world, particularly Europe and North America.

In this issue, the author met with Mustafa Barzani and wrote, “The Kurds, he declared, were struggling not only for their own freedom but also for that of everyone in Iraq. The Baathist Government in Baghdad, he went on, was the Kurds’ only foe. ‘We want nothing more than an autonomous Kurdistan within a democratic Iraq.’”

Struggle of the Kurds August 1992

Focuses on the plight of Kurds following mass exodus into the wintry mountains along the Turkey and Iran borders - text by Christopher Hitchens, with photos by Ed Kashi who also produced the photos for the January 2006 NatGeo article.

The Dawn of Humans: Neandertals January 1996

Among this article’s features is the Shanidar Cave, about a 2-hour drive from Erbil, where 50,000-year old Neandertal skeletons were found buried according to ritual, with flowers, the earliest indication of human-like beings (hominids) having feelings for each other.

The Kurds in Control January 2006

Features “The Other Iraq”. It’s all there in black and white text, and convincing color photographs by Ed Kashi.

During the summer of 1957 United States Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas with only his wife and her woman friend drove from Karachi (Pakistan) to Istanbul in a 1956 Chevrolet station wagon. They passed through Iraqi Kurdistan, including Kirkuk, Baadre and Lalish, and up the Hamilton Road to Haj Omran.

by William O. Douglas Part 1 of a road journey from Karachi (Pakistan) to Istanbul via Afghanistan, Iran, and Iraq - through Khanaquin to Baghdad.

Station Wagon Odyssey: Baghdad to Istanbul January 1959

by William O. Douglas Part 2 of a road journey from Karachi (Pakistan) to Istanbul via Afghanistan, Iran, and Iraq - from Baghdad to Kirkuk, Mosul, Hatra, Yezidis - Baidhra and Lalish, Tel Kayf, Erbil, Hamilton Road to Hajj Omran, and back into Iran to Turkey.

BOOKS

Many books have been written on Kurdistan and many more are awaited. Here are two key books that offer in-depth background information and insights on where the current Iraqi Kurdistan has recently come from. Both books, written separately and at very different times, fit together.

The Kurdish National Movement: Its Origins and Development

by Wadie Jwaideh (Syracuse University Press, 2006); based on a PhD dissertation submitted to Syracuse University in 1960. Jwaideh was a Christian born in Basra who served the Iraqi Government in Iraqi Kurdistan during the 1940s. Much of his research was conducted in Britain and France, and also at Harvard and Johns Hopkins Universities. He served on the faculty of Indiana University for over 25 years from where he retired in 1987 as chairman of the Department of Near Eastern Languages and Literatures which he was instrumental in establishing.

Mustafa Barzani and the Kurdish Liberation Movement (1931-1961)

by Masoud Barzani (Palgrave MacMillan, 2003). Excels not only for its observations and insights, but also for the publication of numerous documents. For example, an especially telling document is Iraqi Prime Minister Nuri al-Sa'id's letter of resignation. And there are many more.

Kurdistan: In the Shadow of History

by Susan Meiselas (University of Chicago Press, 2008) Available in both hardback and paperback, beautifully illustrated with old and more recent photos, 472 pages. A treasure.

Journey Among Brave Men

by Dana Adams Schmidt (Little, Brown, 1964) Another treasure. From an obituary in The New York Times: "Mr. Schmidt was with The Times from 1943 to 1972. He won the Overseas Press Club's George Polk Award in 1963 for "the best reporting requiring exceptional courage and enterprise abroad" for a series of articles on the Kurdish rebels in Iraq. At the time, Mr. Schmidt was based in Beirut, Lebanon."

After Such Knowledge, What Forgiveness

by Jonathan Randal (Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 1997) Stories of Kurdistan's failures in becoming a nation-state and the role of international powers, including their betrayals. Based on firsthand observations by one of the earliest correspondents to Iraqi Kurdistan.

Invisible Nation: How the Kurds' Quest for Statehood is Shaping Iraq and the Middle East

by Quil Lawrence (Walker & Company, 2008). An account of the effects of the Kurdish struggle for statehood since the collapse of the Ottoman Empire in 1918 to the events of 1991 with the formation of the Kurdistan Region of Iraq, and the continuing pursuit since 2003 of autonomy in post-Saddam Iraq.

Road Through Kurdistan: The Narrative of an Engineer in Iraq

by Archibald Milne Hamilton (Tauris Parke Paperbacks, 2005) First published in 1937 this book is about what today is still called the 'Hamilton Road', one of the world's great drives, through the deepest canyons in the Middle East and up through the highest mountains in Iraq, built in 1928-1932 to connect the British and Persian Empires. Earlier used hardback editions are available for about $20 and up. The latest edition (2005, paperback) is available new for about $200!

The Kurdish National Movement

by Chris Kutschera (e-book, Amazon Digital Services, Inc., 2012) Good detail, notably around the period of the breakup of the Ottoman Empire.

Iraq and Rupert Hay's Two Years in Kurdistan

by Paul J. Rich (Lexington Books, 2008) Detailing two years (1918-1920) in the life of a British political officer charged with establishing and maintaining British rule in the Kurdish district of Arbil in Iraq, this personal account provides a thorough discussion of Kurdish society from the viewpoint of Captain William Rupert Hay. Chronicling the British government's desperate attempts to establish a civil administration in Iraq just after World War I, Two Years in Kurdistan shows how, as member of the Indian Political Service, Captain Hay attempted to bring British rule to his corner of Iraq.

The Kurdish Republic of 1946

by William Eagleton (Oxford U P, 1963) Excerpts (from "Epilogue"): "What did the Kurdish Republic of 1946 really represent: a valiant national struggle or a treacherous separatist revolt? What had Barzani participation involved: a selfless contribution to a noble cause, or a self-seeking attempt to extent personal and tribal influence? During the years since the Republic collapsed these questions have been answered only in relation to personal or national prejudices. It has become the facts themselves, apart from their interpretation, had begun to drift into obscurity that the telling of this story was undertaken."

"Once again the tribes of a portion of Kurdistan have taken up arms in a struggle against heavy odds, possessed by mixed ambitions. In some case they are sustained by little more than the old Kurdish tradition that Shar chaktira la bekariya (Fighting is better than idleness). And it can be predicted for the future, as we know from the past, that the Kurds in their distant mountains and separated villages will at times be forgotten and ignored. Then, when moved by resolve or temerity, some of the characters of this book, and others, younger and perhaps unknown in Mahabad, will be heard of once again."

"The fighting qualities of the Kurd have often been described. Brave, tireless, cheerful, trained since childhood in the use of light weapons, the Kurdish tribesman was exactly suited to the warfare expected of him. As a rule he far surpassed the Arab soldier brought from the plains, despite all the advantages of better training and discipline enjoyed by the latter." * * * "The Kurds wanted autonomy. The target antedated the outbreak of open hostilities. It had been expressed on solemn occasions ever since the 1958 revolution – when the Provisional Constitution was discussed, when Kha-bat was first published, during the fifth congress of the KDP. With the insurrection autonomy became the official war aim, freely communicated at home and abroad. The Kurdish leadership explicitly reserved the right of the Kurds to secession and independence: it was of their own free will, they claimed, that they chose to retain the citizenship of a sovereign state with a large Arab majority."

Director: Hiner Saleem

Cast: Korkmaz Arslan, Golshifteh Farhani, Suat Usta

France, Kurdistan. 100 minutes

Baran, a Kurdish independence war hero, is now sheriff in Erbil, the capital city. No longer feeling useful in this society now at peace, he thinks about quitting the police force, but instead agrees to be stationed in a small valley, at the very borders of Iran, Turkey, and Iraq. It is a lawless territory, right at the heart of illegal drug, medication and alcohol trafficking. Having arrived in the small village, he refuses to bow down to Aga Azzi, the seriously corrupt tribal chief and absolute ruler of the area. Baran meets Govend, the village school teacher, who is also rejected by the villagers. Like Baran, she represents another law, that of the young and autonomous Kurdish state. Govend is all the more vulnerable as she is not a married woman.

BABAMIN SESA - 2012

Directors: Orhan Eskiloy, Zeynel Dogan

Cast: Basé Dogan, Gulizar Dogan, Zeynel Dogan

Turkey. 88 minutes

Base lives on her own in Elbistan, southern Turkey. Her one hope in life is for her oldest son Hasan to come home and make a life for himself like everyone else. She attributes the silent phone calls she receives at home to Hasan. At around the same time, her younger son Mehmet, who lives in Diyarbakir, finds out that he's to be a father. While moving into a new flat, he comes across an audiotape of his mother and himself as a boy which was recorded to send to his father. Mehmet sets off for Elbistan to look for the tapes his father made and persuade his mother to come and live in Diyarbakir. When Mehmet finds his mother unable to think of anything but Hasan, he slowly manoeuvres himself into her world, dealing with the repairs and garden jobs Base is keen to get done. At the same time, he hunts around the house for his father's tapes. Although Base tries to put Mehmet off, saying there are no tapes left, she fails to deter him. As Mehmet continues looking for the tapes, he begins learning things about his family he didn't know before.

BEKAS - 2012

Director: Karzan Kader

Writer: Karzan Kader

Cast: Zamand Taha, Sarwar Fazil

Sweden. 97 minutes

ÁIraq in the early 1990 was a devastating land to survive in. When we think of Iraq, the first thing that tends to pop into our minds is the war and Saddam Hussein. But there is another side too - it is perhaps the most notorious country in the world and it goes by the name Kurdistan. Welcome to BEKAS. This is a story about two homeless brothers (Zana, 7 and Dana, 10) who live on the edge of survival. In the beginning of the story they catch a glimpse of Superman through a hole in the wall at the local cinema. Zana and Dana decide that they want to go to America and live with Superman. Once they get there he can solve all their problems, make their lives easy and punish everyone that has been mean to them. Zana, the younger brother, starts to make a list of all people he is going to tell Superman to punish. On top of the list is Saddam Hussein. Dana on the other hand makes a concrete plan for what they need to get there; money, passports, transportation and a way to get across the border. Unfortunately they have neither of those. But in spite of everything they decide to follow the dream.

Turkey. 102 minutes.

Ten-year old Gulistan and her younger brother Firat live happily with their parents in Diyarbakir, the heart of Turkish Kurdistan. Tragedy strikes when their mother and father are shot down by paramilitary gunmen before their eyes. Traumatized and orphaned, Gulistan, Firat and their infant sister are placed in the care of their young, politically-active aunt Yekbun who soon disappears without a trace. As days turn into weeks, the money that their aunt left them runs out. Eventually, the children have to fend for themselves on the streets, where one day, Gulistan is shocked to come across the murderer of her parents.

THE LEGEND OF KAWA, THE BLACKSMITH - 2009

Directors: Stuart Palmer, Havi Ibrahim

CGI-animated developed and produced by a community project in Hull, England

English Voices by: John Ainsworth, Andrew Rolfe, Dom Heffer

Kurdish voices by: Salam Qassab, Zizo Jujer, Rashed

King Zohak of Mesopotamia is tricked by the evil demon, and a curse placed upon him causing two large black snakes to grow from his shoulders, which he must continuously feed with the brains of children. As children are snatched from the surrounding towns and villages to feed the insatiable hunger of the snakes, the sun refuses to shine and the land becomes cold and desolate. When a humble blacksmith, Kawa has lost all his beloved children except one to the curse-stricken Zohak, he strikes a mighty blow with his hammer to break the evil curse and bring light back to the country.

WINTERLAND - 2007

Director: Hisham Zaman

Cast: Raouf Saraj, Shler Rahnoma, Kawa Gilli

Norway. 52 minutes.

Kurdish refugee, Renas, is living in the very north of Norway. In a remote desolate house. In the middle of snowy nowhere. But soon his special princess, Fermesk, will be joining him. Though the couple has never met, they have already fallen in love from looking at each other's photographs and talking on the phone. Their families have performed a wedding ceremony back home in Iraq, and Fermesk is put on a plane. The first encounter at the airport does not live up to their expectations, however. Neither look very much like their flattering photos would indicate. Fermesk is now a much bigger woman, and Renas isn't quite the handsome young man anymore.

BERITAN - 2006

Directors: Halil Uysal, Jinda Baran, Dersim Zeravanr

Cast: Beritan Cûdi, Jinda Baran, Rubar Qamislo, Ömer Harran, Jinda Wan, Nugayla, Beritan Boran, Gesbun, Sterk Amed, Dersim Zeravan, Xebat Serhat, Rezan Iran, Andok Amed, Ahin Qubani, M.Emin, Bager Mardin, Raperin, Hasan Afrin, Erkan Safir.

South Kurdistan (Iraq). 180 minutes. Kurdish (Kurmanji) and Turkish

Filmed in the Kurdish mountains and acted by real guerrilla fighters, this is the true story of Kurdish heroine Gülnaz Karatas, nickname Beritan, who joined the Kurdish resistance movement. She was both a poet and a resistance fighter who also fought the wrong doings committed by some commanders within the PKK's military wing, before dying a heroic death, throwing herself off a cliff after running out of ammunition.

HALF MOON (NIVE HEYVE) - 2006

Director: Bahman Ghobadi

Cast: Ismail Ghaffari, Allah Morad Rashtiani, Farzin Sabooni, Kambiz Arshi, Sadiq Behzadpoor, Ali Ashraf Rezai, Reza Haj Khosravi, Mohamad Nahid, Bahram Zarei Hedieh Tehrani, Golshifteh Farahani, Hassan Poorshirazi

South Kurdistan (Iraq), Iran, Austria. 140 minutes. Kurdish with English subtitles.

Saddam has fallen and Mamo, a renowned Kurdish musician, begins a journey to Iraq with his sons to perform a concert. An old friend drives the minibus that picks up Mamo's sons one by one. Although one son tells of the dire predictions of his village elders if the journey continues, Mamo is determined to carry on. Borders are crossed, difficulties are faced and the journey becomes both an adventure and an exploration. This outstanding new film from Bahman Ghobadi (TURTLES CAN FLY) won the top prize at the San Sebastian Film Festival together with awards for writing and photography.

KILOMETRE ZERO - 2005

Director: Hiner Saleem

Cast: Nazmi Kirik, Belçim Bilgin, Eyam Ekrem, Ehmed Qeladizeyi, Nezar Selami.

France-South Kurdistan (Iraq). 96minutes. Kurdish with English subtitles.

Iraq 1988. Young husband and father Ako is forced to join Saddam Hussein's army. The unwilling soldier dreams of fleeing the country, but his wife Selma refuses to leave while her old bedridden father is still alive. Ako is sent away to the frontline of the Iran-Iraq War, where he experiences not only the reality of war but, because of his Kurdish background, also abuse from all sides. Desperation calls for desperate measures.

TURTLES CAN FLY (KUSI JI DIKARIN BIFIRIN) - 2004

Director: Bahman Ghobadi

Cast: Avaz Latif, Soran Ebrahim, Hirsh Feyssal, Saddam Hossien Feysel, Abdul Rahman Karim

Iraq-Iran. 95 minutes. Kurdish with English subtitles.

Bahman Ghobadi's third feature film after A TIME FOR DRUNKEN HORSES and MAROONED IN IRAQ is set in a village in Iraqi Kurdistan, on the border between Iran and Turkey, where the villagers desperately seek a satellite dish antenna in order to keep updated on the impending attack of the Americans in Iraq. Coming from another village with his younger sister and her child, a mutilated boy has a foreboding: the war is getting closer and closer... TURTLES CAN FLY won the main prize at the San Sebastian Film Festival in September. "Ghobadi displays a complete command of his art as he shifts between - and even blends - wrenching tragedy and amusing comedy." (Variety)

COLOURFUL DREAMS (XEWNÊN RENGIN) - 2003

Director: Mano Khalil

Cast: Hasa H. Inan, David Imhoof, Max Rüdlinger, Sandra Forrer, Rezan Cetin

Switzerland. 60 minutes. Kurdish with English subtitles.

COLOURFUL DREAMS could be the story of every artist who has great dreams - dreams which are difficult to translate reality and often fade like spring blossom blown away in the wind. It could also be the story of a people who, having lost their homeland, can no longer find peace of mind.

VODKA LEMON (VODKA LEYMUN) - 2003

Director: Hiner Saleem Cast: Romen Avinian, Lala Sarkissian, Ivan Franek

France-Italy-Switzerland-Armenia. 90 minutes.

Armenian, Kurdish with English subtitles / PG

Hiner Saleem's gentle tragi-comedy tells of Hamo, an ageing widower, who finds love in, of all places, a cemetery. But it's also the story of his tiny Kurdish village - a remote, snowbound outpost the real and the surreal agreeably co-exist. With his wife in the ground, his only hope rests in an adult son who has immigrated to France. Saleem surrounds his protagonists with a colourful gallery of eccentrics. The real star, though, is the rugged, mountainous landscape: a winter wonderland that will have you blinking in chilly awe. The marvel is that Saleem finds human empathy and alcohol-fuelled bonhomie flourishing in such a forbidding and melancholy wilderness." (BBCi Films)

JIYAN - 2002

Director: Jano Rosebiani

Cast: Kurdo Galali, Pisheng Berzinci, Çoman Hawrami

Kurdistan. 94 minutes. Kurdish with English subtitles.

Five years after the infamous chemical and biological bombing of Halabja, Diyari, a Kurdish/American Samaritan, returns to his homeland to build an orphanage in what is left of Halabja. During the course of his stay, he meets a colourful bunch of townfolk, many of whom remain physically and/or psychologically marked with the effects of the chemical agents. Among them is Jiyani, a ten year old orphan. A strong bond between the two ensues and later he names the orphanage after her.

MAROONED IN IRAQ - 2002

Director: Bahman Ghobadi

Cast: Allah-morad Rashtian, Faegh Mohammadi, Iran Ghobadi

Iran. 110 minutes. Kurdish with English subtitles.

An aging Kurdish singer, Mirza, persuades his two grown musician sons to accompany him on a mission into Iraq to locate his ex-wife, who, rumour has it, needs him. The journey takes them through a lawless land of bombs and bandits where the only policemen they encounter are handcuffed and in underwear. The film portrays the Kurds living on the border of Iran and Iraq not only as victims, but also as people who love music, life and children, and have a wicked sense of humour that enables them to survive persecution. Winner of the Best Film award at the Chicago Film Festival, although director Bahman Ghobadi turned down the award after the US authorities refused him an entry visa.

TIREJ - 2002

Director: Halil Uysal

Editor: Ozgur Reyzan

Cast: Mehmet Emin, Harun Ahmed

Produced by: Martyr Sefkan Culture & Art School, Cinema Dept.

Kurdistan. 50 minutes. Kurdish with English subtitles.

A film written, directed and acted by real life guerrillas and based on a true story, this is perhaps the first feature made entirely by guerrillas. It tells the story of a clash with the Turkish army. After fierce fighting, two guerrillas survive and are encircled by the Turkish army. The war is seen from the perspective of the guerrillas. Will they survive? Will other guerrillas come to their rescue? What are their thoughts when they are fighting, and what will go into the diary of one of the guerrillas?

TALL MIRROR (EYNA BEJNÊ) - 2002

Director: Halil Uysal

Cast: Sabriye fke, Hevi Sanoger, Tofan Silan, Sadik Cudi

Kurdistan. 100 minutes. Kurdish with English subtitles.

An exploration of the daily life of the Kurdish guerillas through the eyes of a child called Sakine. The mountain guerillas attempt to bring a mirror from a nearby village as a birthday present for Sakine. The ensuing journey with four guerillas is journey of discovery for Sakine and she makes friends with them. A mirror held up to the life in the mountains.

A TIME FOR DRUNKEN HORSES - 2000

Director: Bahman Ghobadi

Cast: Nezhad Ekhtiar-Dini, Amaneh Ekhtiar-Dini, Madi Ekhtiar-Dini.

Kurdistan-Iran. 80 minutes. Farsi and Sorani with English subtitles.

In Iranian Kurdistan, very near the border with Iraq, five brothers and sisters live at subsistence level. The younger boy has a serious illness. The medicine he takes is expensive, and the doctor says he has to be operated on soon to have a chance of surviving. Despite the efforts of the eldest brother who takes on lots of odd jobs, the family is unable to pay for the operation. So, the elder sister accepts to marry an Iraqi who is prepared to give them financial help for the operation. However, the future spouse's family refuses to let the sick boy cross the border.

BEYOND OUR DREAMS - 2000

Director: Hiner Saleem

Cast: Olivier Sitruk, Rosanna Vite Mesropian

France-Armenia-Italy. 100 minutes. French and Kirmanji with English subtitles.

Hiner Saleem's second feature tracks a young refugee couple's flight from Kurdistan to hopeful sanctuary in Paris, braving travails comic and tragic on their long, serpentine path. Already struggling toward an uncertain destination at the outset, childhood sweethearts Dolovan and Zara are first seen huffing across the frozen Caucasian Mountains. Not by choice: Saying "We have no country," Dolovan is resigned to the necessity of leaving their lifelong village in Mesopotamia, where ethnic strife has drawn a vicious line between local Kurds and their suddenly intolerant neighbours. Zara is more reluctant, and their odyssey starts very badly as her elderly parents, lagging behind, are lost to the elements." (Dennis Harvey, Variety)

THE PHOTOGRAPH (FOTOGRAF) - 2000

Director: Kazim Öz

Cast: Feyyaz Duman, Nazmi Kirik, Mizgin Kapazan, Zülfiye Dolu.

Turkey. 66 minutes. Turkish and Kirmanji with English subtitles.

An imaginatively shot and revealing film following the stories of two young men travelling to Turkish Kurdistan by bus. They sit next to each other, each of them hiding the reason for his journey from the other. Who are they? Where are they going? And why? A strange kind of proximity and warmth develops between the two of them. The road, the cigarettes and the discomfort they have shared leaves a trace that will reverberate after their paths have separated.

AX (LAND) - 1999

Director: Kazim Oz

Turkey

The story of an old Kurdish man, who insists on not leaving his village, from which the people are forced by the Turkish army, to migrate. The only thing left from the former active life is a dead silence and places full of memories.

LONG LIVE THE BRIDE... AND THE LIBERATION OF KURDISTAN - 1997

Director: Hiner Saleem

Cast: Georges Corraface, Marina Kobakhidze, Tuncel Kurtiz

France. 96 minutes. French and Kurdish with English subtitles.

Set inside the 100,000-population Kurdish community in Paris. Cheto seeks a wife via videotapes while still seeing his French girlfriend, immigration office worker Christine. Cheto places an order for a beautiful girl, but he's disappointed when her sister, country girl Mina, arrives at the airport as a substitute. Family pressure forces him to marry her. Unhappy with the way she's treated by Cheto, Mina acquires some progressive ideas from Leila and other local feminists, leading to confrontations with Cheto.

A SONG FOR BEKO (KELAMEK JIB O BEKO) - 1992

Director: Nizamettin Aric

YOL (THE JOURNEY) - 1982

Directors: Serif Gören, Yilmaz Güney

Cast: Tarik Akan, Halil Ergün, Meral Orhonsay, Semra Uçar.

Turkey. 111 minutes. Turkish with English subtitles.

The notoriously brutal Turkish prison system undergoes a rare moment of compassion in YOL. Five convicts are given a week's leave from jail so that they may visit their friends, families and lovers. Sadly, each of the men is confronted with tragedy, disillusionment or both upon arriving home. Writer Yilmaz Güney knew what he was talking about: he spent much of his adult life in prison for various political activities. Using the 'limited-leave' device as a launching pad, Güney uses the journey to savagely skewer many of Turkey's antiquated sociopolitical attitudes, notably the subjugation of women.

THE HERD (SÜRÜ) - 1978

Director: Zeki Ökten / Yılmaz Güney

Cast: Tarık Akan, Melike Demirag, Tuncel Kurtiz.

Turkey. 114 minutes. Turkish with English subtitles.

The film tells the story of a family of nomadic shepherds destroyed by their contact with modern civilization as they transport a flock of sheep by train to Ankara. The central figure in the film is the son who tries to heal the rifts caused by family vendettas and to adapt to modern society. Eventually he is destroyed - driven to inarticulate revolt and then promptly beaten and arrested - just as the old patriarch is swallowed up in the anonymity of sprawling present day Ankara.
